Vb, can you and Sean take a look at this? I saw you update from CLI this afternoon, perhaps the naming is confusing the updater?

More specific it thinks your going from a nightly train to a stable one.

You're not allowed to change away from the nightly train, it is considered a downgrade.
If you have an existing boot environment that uses that train, boot into it in order to upgrade that train

Just adding that it wont let me upgrade from FreeNAS-11.0-U4 (54848d13b) to the FreeNAS 11.1-Prerelease. I get the same error message

This appears to be more then just a naming issue as manual updates also fail.

Likely they are aware of this since a simple naming issue would have be resolved quickly and this was reported 9 hours ago.

So a little more waiting is needed it seems.

Ahhh i see where this went wrong.

I was designed with the new UI rather than the old so updating through the new UI works but the old one broke tell testing goes through in the nightlies.

For now people can upgrade using the new UI.

A easy oversight to make given all that's going on.

I can upgrade through the new GUI but not through the old GUI
The machine was running on FreeNAS 11.0-u4

I tried to update in the old UI from U4 to pre-release, it gave me the Downgrade error as specified in the image(downgrade)
I tried doing the same from the new UI, it worked as shown in the image(u4toprel)
