Description

Logged in as root in FreeNAS 11.1 using Firefox doesn't prompt for a password once you logout, in order to log back in.

1. Login as root
2. Click logout from left hand menu
3. Click login from top navigation bar
4. Click try new BETA ui
5. You are logged back in as root without being prompted for a password.

This seems like a pretty big security flaw. Once I logout, I should be logged out of all UIs.

If this can't be replicated I'm happy to provide further information, please let me know what you need.

Yes

I don't know how to edit my OP, sorry. Step 1 should say 'login as root in old UI'

I don't intend to move from the stable train, sorry. Are you not able to replicate on stable?

This should be fixed in 11.2, I am making it where browsing away from the page will log you out, for now just log out of the new ui before going into the old ui with this commit it should properly use a token instead of keeping the username and password and the token should expire if the user browses away from the ui for more than a minute.
